COMPLETE 4 PIECE MATCHED SET OF LUGGAGE

Unbelievably Priced at ONLY $2.98

Yes, that price is correct . . . Only $2.98 for the complete 4 piece set. Not $2.98 each, but $2.98 complete for all 4 pieces. And, there is nothing else to buy . . . no extras, no additions. Its modern appearance and wide-stitched simulated leatherette material will amaze you with its good looks.

IMPORTED AND MASS PRODUCED TO MAKE THIS PRICE POSSIBLE

This tremendous bargain is possible only through the use of pressed chip-board. This wonderfully versatile material bends around three sides and is bonded by sturdy wide stitching to the overlapping closing. Snap locks and handles are riveted in place. The big one has extra metal stripping for strength and long wear. Inside has laminated modern design print. Each piece fits inside the next larger which saves your storage space and makes our shipping easier.

NOT FANCY LUGGAGE — BUT USEFUL, PRACTICAL

You will be thrilled and delighted with the many, many uses you will find for this set. It will make a marvelous gift and your thoughtfulness will be appreciated for such a long time. Lightweight. It avoids the silly situation where the luggage weighs more than the clothing carried. When this offer was first made to us by the overseas company we couldn't believe our ears. But we were delighted when we saw it just a few days ago—and you will be too. Each piece serves a specific purpose such as vanity and cosmetic case (8"), personal Valet (16") overnight case (22") or family size (14").

Remember, the complete price for all 4 matched pieces if luggage is only $2.98. Because of its size, we are forced to ask for an additional 45¢ shipping charge.

10 Day Free Trial

Simply fill in the coupon and when your 4 piece matching set of luggage arrives, pay the postman only $2.98 plus C.O.D. and shipping charges. Then, even use them for 10 full days. If you are not 100% delighted then simply return them for your full purchase price refund.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

MUSIC LOVER

MA rested her vacuum cleaner against the hall wall and opened Elna's door. "Didn't you hear me?" ma called. "Turn down that music."

Elna turned, surprised. "Your vacuum cleaner must have been making too much noise, ma." She turned down the volume on the record player, but still moved her hand, trying to pick up the interrupted beat.

"Well, I declare," ma said, staring at her changed daughter. "Your player has been going Bonga! Bonga! Bonga! when you should've been out getting fresh air on a nice afternoon like this."

"I'm all right, ma," Elna said.

"I don't know," ma was puzzled. "I think it was a mistake taking a house. When we lived in hotels, you got out more. Maybe you weren't meant for a house."

"Mother, what a thing to say," Elna smiled.

"Now you shut off that player and get some fresh air."

There was no arguing with ma when she used that voice, so Elna sighed and stopped her record player. Ma went back to finish the cleaning.

It wasn't only that young Frankie Fair played the sweetest trumpet this side of the Mason-Dixon line that made Elna hunger for more and more of that clean, soaring music . . . it was because she had suddenly begun to personally throb as one with the Comet Jets' beautiful rhythmic beat.

Until recently Elna had not been an average teen-ager. She seemed to like what most kids went for; the same movies, the same sodas, dancing, books, magazines and T.V. But it was an act. Some nights, when she was trying to fall asleep, she had to admit to herself that she just didn't care. When girls had a crush on young, handsome movie actors, she oohed and ahed . . . but felt an inner silliness.

She couldn't "Identify," as she said, with those characters. They were a million miles away.

It shouldn't have been that way with music, the Universal language, but it was, and not because Elna was long-hair while the other kids were all Rock and Roll types; it was only that what the others liked just washed past her shores like an impersonal tide. And then, two weeks ago at the sorority hop, where Kim and Jennifer, her two very best friends, were making a hopping-bopping display of their new ability to dance everything from the Mamba and the Cha-Cha to some new thing, "The How-Do-I" which they declared they created, things changed.

Before, Elna had acted as if she admired those who were "With It" . . . but she couldn't, not really. Real admiration meant envy. And she just didn't envy them. At the sorority dance, while everyone danced with her friends, imitated them, admired them, Elna just wanted to be home. And then, that nice-looking boy who played trumpet for the Comet Jets, came down from the bandstand during a rest and said "Mind?" very pleasantly, and took the seat alongside her.

Elna smiled. She had noticed this young, serious-looking boy, who looked much too young to be working with the older men in that top band. And while everyone else had been intent on their dancing, and the parties they'd go on to from there, Elna thought about this fellow who looked vaguely familiar. But many people looked vaguely familiar to Elna. That wasn't because there was anything vague about her. It was just because she had lived in so many places. These last six months she had been living in Slayton were the longest she remembered staying in one home. And this was the first house her parents had bought.

Elna's father represented a firm that had wide interests and he was a traveling trouble shooter, moving constantly, never long in one area. So Elna had met people in many places. At first she used to feel miserable giving up new friends, whom she wanted to keep on seeing and knowing. But after a while, even when she was still quite small, she determined to keep herself from becoming too emotionally involved with anybody . . . the breaks were too painful. She had developed a quality of standing off, observing as from a distance even while being in the company of girls and boys.

And so she never really developed in some areas the way other girls did. She didn't develop crushes on movie stars, on singers, and bands like many of the teens she had known. She thought much of that behavior was silly, but she never said as much. In fact, she thought more often that something must be wrong with herself . . . and in a way she resented the gypsy way of life she had known. When other kids spoke with sincere envy of Elna's "Magic Carpet," she smiled; if they only knew, if they only appreciated how nice it was to have roots deep down someplace.

"Remember the Hotel Chatterton in Waterton?" Frankie Fair asked as he sat beside Elna at the sorority dance.

Elna looked at him. "The Hotel Chatterton in Waterton?" She thought, and then remembered. "Yes . . . I remember. Five, six years ago. We stayed there one whole month."

"Remember the little kid who played drums once in a while for his father's band in the ballroom?"

"I'm sorry," Elna said, "I never went into the ballroom. But I remember," she smiled, "I remember the little boy who sat on the other side of the lobby and who looked at people the way I did. And I hoped he'd come over and talk to me. I was a shy one all right. And lonely."

"Me too," he said. "I didn't know how to talk to kids. I've learned since, I guess. But I never forgot you. For a month you used to sit there and just look at people, or read."

He looked at his hands and made movements as though fingering a trumpet. "I switched to the trumpet after that," he said.

"I would go out into the country with my horn and play something. I couldn't do that with a set of traps . . . I used to wish I could be like other people, settle down and stay in one place. But pop was a musician; he traveled. How I envied other kids. And to take my mind off what I couldn't have, I dived deep into my music. After I switched to the horn, I started making orchestrations. I do the arrangements for the Comet Jets."

The band was beginning to play again. "Dance?" he invited.

Elna danced with Frankie Fair. And it was different. She never before felt she belonged anyplace. Now she felt that she belonged here with him. And dancing, she realized a quick truth like a clear, singing thought; it wasn't so much making your roots go down deep in one place that gave you the secure sense of belonging . . . it was a feeling of kinship with someone you liked to be with. Like being with your parents. Like being with Frankie Fair.

Elna's mother opened the door again. "Land sakes alive," she said. "You have changed, Elna. I thought you slipped out. There's a phone call for you. Didn't you hear the phone ringing?"

"I guess I've been waiting for it to ring, ma."

It was Frankie Fair. "Elna," he said, "would you like to come with me? There's a spot near Crestwave, near the shore. It's nearly deserted now, and I'd like to play my horn. Would you care to come and listen to me play?"

"I'll make sandwiches and you bring the cokes."

"Hey . . ." he chuckled, "I like you!"

"I'll be ready when you get here," she said, kind of soft, and feeling that good, wonderful sense of belonging. "See you soon," and she hung up.

And as Elna busied herself preparing for the grandest picnic a girl could know, she felt different, and very good, and very much like the other kids her own age.
